Including Subway Tiles and Hexagonal Tiles

Subway tiles (bevelled-edge tiles & plain brick-shaped or square tiles) are the most-recognised wall tiles from the Art Deco period. They have a proven timeless style and are most often noted for gracing the walls of many historic homes built in the early 20th century. Originally made famous in 1904 for their prominent use in New York City Subway stations, Subway tiles are making a name for themselves once again today.

Subway tiles have the advantage of being able to work with almost any interior-design style. They not only work to create a historic look when paired with hexagonal or penny-round mosaic floor tiles, but also a contemporary look on kitchen splashbacks when coordinated with stainless steel and modern appliances.

Design ideas abound when using bevelled-edge Subway tiles in kitchens and bathrooms. We often work with interior designers who love to use Subway tiles when designing modern kitchens. One designer recently finished a home using stainless steel appliances, a stainless steel stove, warm-toned granite benchtops, track lighting and cream Subway bevel tiles in 200x100mm -- all color-coordinated with the other elements in the room. The photo at left shows the result.

The most authentic Subway tile size is the rectangular 150x75mm (6"x3") format. In addition to this original size, we also stock Subway tiles sizes including: 200x100mm (8"x4") and 150x150mm (6"x6") with either plain or beveled edges. Along with these new sizes comes the ability to use Subway Tiles on your kitchen or bathroom walls in new and innovative ways. While you can always lay these tiles in an offset 'brickbond' pattern, you may choose 'stackbond', 'English bond', 'basket weave', 'soldier pattern' or 'diagonal' (45 degree) laying patterns to enhance your tile layout. At The Tile Mob, we stock Subway tiles in White gloss, Cream gloss, Black gloss & Red gloss. Other wall tiles in our Art Deco range include the New York series, available in Black & White gloss with a plain finish, Slide pattern (see below) and Diamond pattern.

The Tile Mob is the home of Art Deco floor tiles Brisbane and we have many varieties to co-ordinate with our Subway wall tiles. Our most popular designs are hexagonal (two sizes: 25x25mm vitrified and 80x80mm glazed ceramic in Black and White) and the Art Deco 'Penny Round' -- available in White Gloss, Matt Black and Silver.

The design possibilities using Subway tiles are limitless. No matter what style or theme is present in your home, contact our design team at The Tile Mob to answer the questions you have on using Subway tiles.
